1 Summary

Academic profile

Agregação (Univ. Aberta, 2009) and PhD (Heriot-Watt Univ., 1993) in Mathematics; MSc (IST, 1989) in Applied Mathematics; BSc (IST, 1985) in Chemical Engineering. Since July 2019 I am Full Professor of Mathematics at Universidade Aberta, Lisbon, Portugal.

Main research contributions

My main areas of research have been in mathematical modelling of coagulation-fragmentation phenomena and of liquid crystal devices using differential equations tools, mainly qualitative methods.

My most recent published work in coagulation type equations was on a generalized exchange-driven growth model (see [1] in section 5.1.1) and on a variety of coagulation type systems, both discrete [3] and continuous [4]. Also relatively recent are works on a model of silicosis disease (see [5], [7], and [8] in section 5.1.1). Previous works include the study of existence and uniqueness of density conserving solutions to coagulation-fragmentation equations (reference [29] in section 5.1.1) where it was first proved that a strong enough fragmentation can prevent gelation to occur. Other contributions to the study of the gelation phenomena include the proof of the occurrence of instantaneous gelation for strong enough coagulation (reference [31] in section 5.1.1) and the proposal of a finite dimensional model for gelation (reference [25] in section 5.1.1). I published the first studies on the extension to coagulation-fragmentation systems of the kind of phase transition behaviour known to occur in Becker-Döring equations (see [26] and [30] in section 5.1.1). Somewhat unexpected, in two studies of coagulation models a relation with nonautonomous predator-prey systems (reference [16] in section 5.1.1) and with competition Lotka-Volterra systems (reference [14] in section 5.1.1) was identified. A number of papers have focused on self-similar solutions in coagulation systems modelling sub-monolayer deposition (see [9, 11, 19, 22] in section 5.1.1, and [3] in section 5.3.1) using qualitative theory methods (invariant regions, centre manifolds, differential inequalities) and asymptotic evaluation of integrals to prove results about the existence and rate of convergence to similarity profiles. Qualitative theory methods seem not to have been used before in this context.

My work on modelling of liquid crystal devices include the study of twist Freedericksz transitions in a liquid crystal cell with pre-twist boundary conditions (see [6], [10] and [17] in section 5.1.1), the study of the bifurcation structure of solutions in a bistable nematic cell (reference [20] in section 5.1.1), and the first rigorous proof of uniqueness of the bifurcating branch of solutions in the Freedericksz transition in a nematic cell with weak anchoring (reference [18] in section 5.1.1).

Most of my research work has been done in collaboration with co-workers (see the relevant references.)
